NOTABLE GATHERING IN MADISON SQUARE

OVERFLOW MEETINGS ARE HELD

Vast Hall Is Jammed By Over Twelve Thousand People.

New York, Aug. 31.—Three hours before the time set for the opening of the meeting to welcome Colonel Bryan ticket holders were clamoring for admittance. Police lines had been formed three blocks from all the Garden entrances. In this way the early comers were well handled. The immense auditorium with its tiers of balconies and galleries rising to the height of the great glass covered roof began to fill up so quickly that the ushers and policemen had difficulty in adhering to the seating arrangements. It was a gay-spirited, good-natured audience, which had a cheer on the tongue for everyone. As the crowd continued to gather the cheering increased in volume. There were calls and counter calls from the various state delegations. The "Nebraska Bryan's Home Folks" arrived in a body and were given seats just back of the speaker's stand.

The hall was devoid of decorations other than the bunting and flags about the temporary stage. But each person had been presented with a flag by the reception committee and the waving of these made a picture such as the Garden, a scene of many notable gatherings, had seldom, if ever, witnessed.

Before the meeting was called to order a band played merrily. Such tunes as "Maryland," "My Old Kentucky Home," "Way Down Upon the Suwanee River," and other southern melodies called forth tumultuous applause: but when the first strains of "Dixie" were sounded, the thousands of Bryan welcomers were on their feet in an instent and the cheers completely drowned the band for a time.

As each notable Democratic visitor entered the hall and was recognized his name was called and the cheering was renewed.

Seats All Taken.

Twelve thousand persons, many of them women, were seated by 7 o'clock and an hour later there was not a vacant seat. The heat in the Garden was so great that a large portion of the glass roof was pushed back, leaving only the stars as a canopy. The galleries early were jammed Hundreds of policemen and 50 firemen were on duty in case of emergency.

At 8 o'clock, when Mr. Bryan had not yet arrived, Harry Walker, on behalf of the Commercial Travelers' Anti-Trust league, called the assembly to order, and introduced Governor Folk, who was given an ovation. When quiet was restored, Governor Folk addressed the meeting, and concluded by introducing Mayor Johnson of Cleveland as chairman of the meeting. The applause was deafening as Mr. Johnson came forward. At this same moment William Randolph Hearst entered a reserve box. For two minutes the crowd cheered without interruption. Many rose and waved hats and handkerchiefs in the direction of Mr. Hearst's box. Then there were more cheers for Mr. Johnson.

When this joint demonstration had but partly subsided Mr. Bryan, accompanied by his wife, entered the Garden and appeared on the platform.

Everybody Cheered.

The crowd which had been so free in its cheering was now fairly beside itself. The men shouted and jumped on seats. They cheered and threw their hats into the air apparently caring naught as to the ultimate fate of the headgear. The [illegible] and the waves of noise which rolled in from the audience and beat upon the speaker's platform. At first the man for whom the demonstration was planned stood bowing and smiling. Then his attitude was one of appeal. This at last prevailed, as the cheering died away in reverberating echoes along the girdered roof, and Mr. Bryan began his address.

When Mr. Bryan uttered his first words, "Mr. Chairman," there was tremendous applause. "Ladies and Gentlemen," he continued, after "three cheers for William J. Bryan" had been called for and given, "how can I thank you for this welcome home? My heart would be flint indeed if it were not touched by your demonstration. My heart would be ungrateful beyond measure if it did not in return consecrate itself to your service. It was kind of the Commercial Travelers' Anti-Trust league to propose this homecoming reception. It was kind in Gov. Folk to come all the way from Missouri to bring the testimony that he brings in his official career of love for civic purity, that he might join in this re- cheered as loudly as they could. Five minutes after Mr. Bryan appeared on the platform, the crowd howled, cheered and screamed, but eventually Chairman Johnson secured comparative quiet and introduced Augustus Thomas, whose every reference to Mr. Bryan called for additional cheers.

Chairman Johnson then introduced Mr. Bryan. Mr. Bryan was presented at 8:40 o'clock. As he arose the audience was on its feet as one man. The cheering which began at that instant did not end until 8:48, and then only after Mr. Bryan had waved his hands frantically in an effort to still

King was similarly honored by his comrades of the 31st. The Paragraph and Chronicle have been giving excellent accounts of the reunion. The former printed a picture of Col. Pren Metham, of the 80th. Speaking of the election it said:

Pittenger; assistant secretary, James Stewart; treasurer, Albert Brown; vice presidents, R. G. Kean, Carroll county; Albert Quigley, Harrison county; John McCoy, Jefferson county; Benj. Soper Belmont county, and J. F. Roming, Tuscarawas. The next reunion of the 98th was decided to be held in St. Clairsville, the date is not yet decided.

The 80th regiment elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, Charles Huff, Coshocton, vice president, John Berton, Dennison and N. C. Clendennin being re-elected secretary. The next reunion of the 80th will be held in Coshocton, the time not yet being decided.

The 30th regiment elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, I. W. Dawson, Toronto, secretary, O. E. Hunt, Newark, treasurer, H. Mushrusher, Toronto. At the business session of the 30th regiment it was decided to hold the next reunion of the 30th in Toronto on the first Wednesday and Thursday in September of 1907.

Navy Wins First Prize In Rifle Match--Other Plums.

Seagirt, N. J., Aug. 31.—After two days of almost incessant rain the steady, bright sunlight was welcomed by the great assemblage of riflemen taking part in the national military tournament. A feature of the day was the performance of Ohio riflemen, who carried off second, third, fourth, fifth and sixth prizes in the off-hand military match from a field of 227 competitors. The carbine match, open to teams of five men, each man firing 7 shots at 200 yards and 7 shots at 500 was won by the second troop, Philadelphia city cavalry, with a score of 290. Second rank was won by the Denver city troop with a score of 292, and third place by the first team of Squadron A of New York, score 287.

John Kethley, an enlisted man of the United States navy, won the first prize, $25, in the off-hand match with a score of 95 out of a possible 100. Institute Holds Final Session

Thursday afternoon Dr. Tussing took up the work with a talk on geography.

After recess Supt. Kendall gave a talk on English work

Supt. Mandis of the Ohio School Improvement Federation then presented the Federation work. His talk was very important. He said that both teacher and board of education who are parties to a contract for engaging a teacher for less than eight months or for less than $40 per month, besides janitor work, are criminally liable. Also any contract wherein the teacher forfeits rights of institute pay is criminal

Friday morning Supt. Kendall gave one of his best talks on spelling. He advocated careful mastery of the important words and less time to the absolute words.

Prof. Graham of Columbus addressed the teachers on the subject of elementary agriculture in the schools. A strong plea was made to the rural teachers to take advantage of the abundant opportunities which surrounded them for the study of nature.

This afternoon the institute closes Prof. Graham will speak again.

Shipping Notes.

The household goods of Rev. J. C. Glover of Ashland arrived in the city today. Mr. Glover will make his home in the city this winter.

C. E. Dunlap and family are moving their household goods to the city from Zanesville.

SCOTT EFFECTS HIS RELEASE BY SMOOTH YARN

Arrested Last Evening At Newark--Claims Wife Attached Money.

C. J. Scott, the traveling man, who passed a worthless check in payment for a forty dollar diamond ring purchased of C. M. Hay, the jeweler, Thursday, a full account of which was made in Thursday's Age, was arrested by the police in Newark Thursday afternoon and brought to this city by Chief Mapel Friday morning.

He was given a hearing before Mayor Smith after which he was given his release following satisfactory explanations and the return of the ring to Mr. Hay.

It appears as if the man were innocent of wrong doing, not knowing that his check would not be honored. He claims to have the money in the bank as represented but it appears has had some trouble with his wife and she attached his funds, of which fact he was ignorant.

Scott went to Zanesville on No. 19 Thursday noon and from there took the interurban to Newark. He was arrested as he stepped from the car at Newark, the police having been sent his description by the local police with the request that he be apprehended.

The costs amounting to about $12 were paid by Scott.

There is a difference of opinion as to whether the local authorities did the proper thing in releasing Scott on his own story. The reply of the bank on which the Scott check was drawn was "C. J. Scott check fraudulent and worthless" and there is doubt as to the man's innocence of wrong doing.

A significant feature of the affair is that Scott requested to have the check returned to him which was done by Mr. Hay upon which the traveling man promptly tore the slip of paper into bits.

City Editor of The Age Gains a Handsome Promotion With The Zanesville Times Recorder Co.

Mr. Ehrich secures the choice "beat" of the city, that of city hall court house, etc., and is induced to leave Coshocton by the hand some increase in salary offered him. Everybody in Coshocton knows, respects and likes Will Ehrich. Always ready to do a friend a good turn, never known to "knock," and possessed of an easy style and fluent pen, he numbers his friends by the score. The Age predicts brilliant success for him.

Mr. Ehrich will be succeeded as reporter by Ernest Hoffman, now city circulation manager, for whom The Age bespeaks the kind offices of the public

The Rev. Fullie Prewer will preach at the Roscoe M. E. church Sunday morning at 10:30.

Smashed Russian Consulates.

Bucharest, Roumania, Aug. 31.—Serious excesses marked the anti-Greek demonstration at Galatz. A thousand demonstrators, after listening to hate speeches, marched through the street, wrecking many Greek shops, and finally assembled in front of the Russian consulate, the windows of which were smashed with stones before the rioters were dispersed.

Earthquake Record.

Berlin, Aug. 31.—The weekly earth quake report of the Geographical institute of Gottingen university shows there were eight earthquakes last week and 20 the previous week. These figures are the highest ever recorded.

JUDICIAL CONVENTION ORRVILLE SEPT. 20

The Republican judicial convention of this subdistrict will be held at Orrville Thursday Sept. 20. The call was made public today.

There is but one candidate before the convention and he is being urged forward by all three counties of the subdistrict. The candidate with this unanimous following is Hon. James Glenn of Coshocton, whose candidacy was urged by The Age two weeks ago and has been hailed with acclaim in the other two counties of the district.

At the recent county convention Mr. Glenn was empowered to select his own delegates. Coshocton is entitled to 19, as may be seen by the official call which appears on the editorial page today.

INSURGENTS ARE SCOURING COUNTRY

May Mean Still Larger Ice Plant

Pennsylvania Wants Estimate on Amount of Ice Local Plant Can Furnish.

The local artifical ice plant may be given a contract to furnish ice to the Pennsylvania railroad company.

The railroad company has asked the ice people as to the amount of ice they would be able to furnish. At the present time the local company could spare three or four cars per week which is probably all the railroad people would want.

Several representatives of the railroad company will be in the city next week when they will take up the matter with the ice people.

There is some talk of the railroad people abandoning their ice basins at Adams Mills and purchasing all their ice from the artificial plants. If they should decide to do this, the local plant would probably have a chance to secure a big contract from the Pennsylvania company which would mean a much bigger ice plant for Coshocton.

Janitors Are Already at Work

The janitors are already at work getting the different school buildings cleaned and ready for occupancy by Sept. 10. Frank Lightell, the janitor-in-chief, is at the Chestnut building; George Clarke, South Lawn; Mrs. Geib, Walnut; Miss Mary Ingham, Bancroft; Mrs. Beaver, Sycamore.

As was mentioned in The Age some time ago the janitors are employed by the month and not by the year as has been the custom.

Gans the Favorite.

Goldfield, Nev., Aug. 31.—Goldfield is overcrowded and visitors continue to pour into town for the Nelson-Gans fight. Reservations have been made in advance for every available room in town. Nelson went five miles on the road at a brisk pace and Gans covered nearly ten miles on the road. The negro is still favorite at 10 to 8.

Death Calls Mrs. Morgan

Passed Away This Morning At Her Home—Aged 81.

Mrs. Lucinda Morgan, the widow of the late George W. Morgan died Friday morning at her home on North Third street. Her health had been failing for some months and when the end came it was as gentle as a babe's falling asleep.

Mrs. Morgan was past 81 years of age having been born Feb. 7, 1825; she was married April 11, 1843 to George W. Morgan who preceeded her to the great beyond 14 years ago. She was the mother of 11 children, five of whom are still living. They are Mrs. W. H. Adams, of Canton; Mrs. V. O. Jeffries, of Columbus; Mrs. R. L. Aultman, of Ovid, Mich.; Mrs. J. O. Kelly and Mrs. J. B. Matthews of this city. City Auditor Charles Smith is a grandson.

The funeral will probably be held Sunday Rev. Robertson of Grace church, of which the deceased has been a consistent member for the past forteen years, will be the officiating minister and interment will be made in Oak Ridge.

FOREIGNER'S PROPERTY IS SEIZED

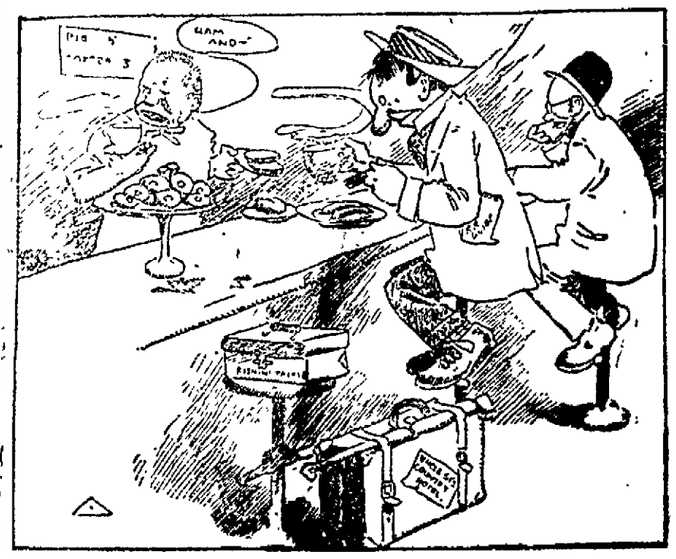

Great Alarm in Santa Clara Province--Many Flee.

Havana, Aug. 31.—Reports received from Manicaragua, in the tobacco district of Santa Clara province, show that there is great alarm among the people there, who are fleeing from the cities on account of the growth of the insurgent forces. Insurrectionists are scouring the country and seizing all the horses and cattle that can be found. On Monday there were 500 insurgents camped outside of Manicaragua and by Tuesday the number had increased to 1,000, considerable additions having been received in the succeeding two days. At first the insurgents did not interfere with American property, but later all animals were taken from the plantations of Kaffenburg & Sons and the Manicaragua Tobacco company of Boston. The Constancia Sugar company, an American corporation having a plantation near Cienfuegos, has filed a claim against the government for damages for livestock taken and property injured. The state department has conferred with Consul General Steinhart regarding the matter.

General Avalos and Pino Guerra are close to each other in the vicinity of Guanes, whither Avalos, with 1,000 cavalry, mounted infantry, rural guards and recruits, has gone. The Associated Press correspondent with General Avalos reports that a considerable number of recruits fell out along the march from San Juan de Martinez, overcome by the heat and choking dust, and that some were ill with fever induced by drinking bad water. The general spirit, however, was good. The story of the plundering of Galafore by Guerra's force has been duplicated on a large scale at Sabillo. When the government troops reached that place Wednsday night they found the general store in indescribable ruin. Every kind of merchandise, liquid or solid clothing, dry goods and everything the insurgents did not want was piled together in stacks. Guerra's men on their arrival there had crowded into the store and begun taking what they chose. Guerra and some of his officers who strenuously tried to prevent them, finally drew their machets and wounded several men who were searching for money. The townspeople assert that there were evidences of consiberable bloodshed. Guerra utterly failed to prevail over his men. The opposing forces are so close that a battle is expected shortly.

The only fight of consequence reported was a three hours' conflict between 150 rural guards and volunteers and an insurgent band, estimated to number 300, near Campo Florde, 70 miles east of Havana. An American who witnessed the fighting says the firing was continuous but scattering and there was no volleying. After two hours of this fighting the combatants came closer together and finally the rural guards and volunteers made a fine charge up a hill, routing the insurgents, who retreated and dispersed. At least 12 insurgents were killed and many more were wounded.

CONFERENCE SERMON BY REV. DR. DUNLAP

Splendid Address That Tells The Creed of The Christian Church.

The Age takes pleasure in printing the sermon delivered by the Rev. Mr Dunlap at the conference of the Mt. Vernon district of the Christian church Thursday morning. It follows in full:

Dearly Beloved:

After sixty five years of conference history in sections and churches contiguous to this place, we have now come for the first time into the city of Coshocton and into this new church for our annual meeting. We are not strangers to the mass of the people but for the sake of a few people who may be in this city and do not know us it may be necessary to introduce ourselves to avoid keeping them in doubt as to who we are and what are our purposes.

We have a mission truly. A mission first common to all the churches of christendom. No church has a divine right of way anywhere unless its first object be to help establish the Lord's will on the earth in the redemption of man. As a part of the great spiritual force of God's kingdom we are humbly trying to recognize this mission, and we shall ever aim to bear our part in this great work. As a christian body we interpret ourselves as wanting to do good by, helping to reclaim the world from its wickedness, and to establish the reign of Christ in righteousness on the earth.

But is there any other mission? In these days of multiplied religious denominations it is generally supposed that every such body represents some distinctive idea pertaining to religious matters. If this then be the rule we are not an exception. We think that we have a message important enough to command the respect of the world's better thought, and to be worthy of all the outlay of consecrated energy and ambition that can be enlisted in its behalf.

The one thing for which our fathers struck in their protest with some of the dominent religious denominations was religious liberty. This very soon suggested that its logical outcome would be christian unity. By a common consent and affinity of feeling our watch words have ever been "liberty and unity." As desirable as unity is there seems to be no way of attaining it except by the pathway of liberty, and when the latter is once fully secured unity will be at hand.

But we must be understood in our contention for liberty. We mean only christian liberty, we want the orthodox term, believing that to be the highest that man can covet. We have no liking for that thing sometimes called liberty which assumes the license to lay loosely with all sacred things. We mean to emphasize the fact that our liberty is in Christ, and in truth is derived from him for it is written, "If the son make you free we shall be free indeed." Christian liberty involves the dissolution of every would be agency that would come between us and God, except that Christ is our mediator and the Holy Spirit is our helper. No pope bishop priest or king has any right to a place between the humblest child of earth and his heavenly father. We may all answer for the influence that we exert over others, but communion is no part of our prerogative. Once there was a veil over the eye, and even over the minds of the people. Even none but prophets and priests could have holy vision. But in Christ the veil is taken away and Paul says, "We all behold as in a glass the glory of the Lord are changed into the same image from glory to glory. The point of application is in the expression "we all" which must mean that our liberty involves an open privilege whereas the privilege was once limited. Every child of grace may now look into the holy of holies without let or hinderance from mortal man.

In about a decade of years ot the close of the eighteenth and reaching into the nineteenth century the initial history of the church we represent began. There were three distinct movements that crystalized into the body known as the christian church. The first was a defection from the Methodist Episcopal church in North Carolina in 1792 in a protest from some of the hard Episcopal rules of that body. Those who came out in that movement organized themselves into a new body taking the name Republican Methodists. The second movement came in about the year 1801 when the doctrine of close communion was strenously held in New England, there was a protest in that section and this time the exodious from the Baptist church and those who were in the movement were first called Christian Baptists. Two or three years later than this came the third movement located in Kentucky. It was the aftermath of the great Cane Ridge revival, one of the most significant revivals that ever fell to the lot of this country. The leading actors in that revival were Presbyterians and the iron clad Calvinism and antiquated usages of that body at that time could not tolerate the aggressive work of these men nor would they offer a real Calvinist home for the converts. With this situation confronting them they made a new organization called the Springfield Presbytery. These three organizations first known respectively as Republican Methodists Christian Baptists and Springfield Presbyterians very quickly each changed their names without any knowledge of each others action, and in fact without any knowledge of each others existence, for those were not days of rapid travel and swift communication, and published to the world that they hereafter would be known only as christians. When these bodeies became known to each other it was not had to discover that they were one, and the separate movements were lost in the body that represents the whole. We have lived in such harmony that it would now be impossible to trace the original lines for a redivision even if there could be found anybody who would desire it. We are now and have been throughout our history illustrating to the world our contention that people brought up under different religious conditions can dweli together in unity if they so will in the love of God.

These movements resulting in the christian church were the natural outgrowth of the spirit of the times. Puritanism had made a lasting impression on all American life. The seed of the Pilgrims had taken deep root on the new continent and the result was a harvest of liberty loving souls. Such a product could not be content and submissive to the political rule of an absolute monarchy, hence the strike of liberty for independence. With the revolution successful the spirit of liberty was in the air and could not be restrained from any reasonable demand. However this spirit seemed to work better in state than in the church. In the latter the progress seemed to be slow, but the spirit of liberty worked steadily and surely in the church even when it seemed to be moving all too slowly. A banner of victory she must yet carry. Christianity was really the mother of liberty and fostered its advance, but churchianity was conservative and unwilling to give liberty a practical setting in religious life. Protestantism had copied too much of the episcopacy of Rome to recognize religious freedom. But following in the wake of the revolution there were bound to be souls who could not be shut in to the old time restrictions of the dominant churches. The coming of the fitting time was only awaited to give expression in favor of the high liberty of the human conscience. It was reasonable to expect some modifications of the old forms and usages that were born in a different environment. The same spirit that caused the revolutionary fathers to declare that "all men are born free and equal" could not be kept out of the church unless stifled out with hard ecclesiasticism. A church that has no elasticity of thought or method become justly antiquated and unfit for human use. It necessarily follows that wherever ecclesiasticism stands in the way of progress it ought to be changed and in the name of liberty for righteousness sake.

In working out the thought of liberty it was easy to see that the individual could not be ignored or have his rights usurped by the crowd. It is time that there are certain concessions we must all make for the harmony and good of society, but no organization religious or secular has any right to demand the sacrifice of personality. God recognized the free agency of many in making his gospel an appeal to win and not a force to drive. When churches undertake to compel lines of thought or faith they are out of harmony with the divine plan. All dictators of faith or forcible curbers of free conscience are therefore self constituted and can claim no authority from him who recognizes no lords to lord it over his heritage.

Our thought of christian liberty has naturally lead us to discard all so called authoritative creeds and confessions of faith as tending to cramp thought, bind the conscience, and to forestall further investigation, for they will do all of these to the extent they are enforced. The whole creed business not only lacks authority but it is absurd in itself. How can rational creatures imagine that a few delegates or bishops can interpret scripture and make a rule of faith at a given time that can stand the test of scholarship and progress for all time to come. Such a supposition involves the dilemma of either mortal weakness in the inception of plenary inspiration in the output and creed makers have been too vain to admit the one, or too reserved to claim the other. Let us now think of the spectacle of a great religious body propagating its creed for some centuries as the true faith and then after much contention set to work and revise and amend it. Wrong was it? Well it may be wrong now. It is indeed a responsibility to be wrong for centuries, but a much greater responsibility to put the law of the church behind the wrong and enforce it as a standard of orthodoxy and of church membership. We prefer the bible as a rule of faith and practice and it looks now as if the trend of all christendom was in that direction.

Our plea for unity was the natural result of our plea for liberty. The plea is in itself scriptural and warranted in the Lord's prayer for his disciples. He prayed that they might be one, he says "One in us as thou father art in me and I in thee." It is probable that the great heart of the people has not intended to be wrong in reference to the Lord's desire for unity. They have simply made divisions by working the assumption that true forms of faith were the essential things in fellowship. That much at least has been an inheritance from the Roman church. The effort to unify the people on statements of doctrine is a failure. For many centuries the christian world has been in a haze of controversy to find the true formula of faith and yet there is no agreement. It is a hopeless task and the effort leads to division rather than to unity. We are bound to differ on questions of philosophical faith even as we differ in looks and in personal tendencies. The one point of faith where all can anchor is faith in Jesus Christ, and that is all that the new testament requires and is inclusive enough to furnish us for all good work.

Sectism stands in the way of unity. Churches become so wedded to their peculiarities that they would rather have them than to have unity and so the Lord's cause suffers the blight. Let us try to realize what sectism does. It first hoists up its standard formula of faith as a test of fellowship, and thus, does it bar out all of God's children who cannot subscribe to it. Its second mischief is wrought in its determination to carry sectarian and unbiblical names. Here again is a dividing line for no one wants to carry a name that misrepresents him. These titles are adroitly gotten up to distinguish denominations from each other and they are effective for that purpose, and it follows that none of them have enough significance to designate the whole body of Christ. These two things are a sufficient arrangment of sectism in these premises.

We love the bible and while we will use all helps possible that we may better understand it, we will not allow any earthly authority to come between us and the word of God. We love the christian name because it is both biblical and comprehensive enough to designate our relation to Christ as his followers, and nothing more do we want. Speaking apologetically we may say that this name was given at the beginning of the expansive period of the Lord' kingdom and to the first gentile church at Antioch. It was evident that no name in previous use could apply to this new condition. They were called christians because both Jews and Gentiles could wear that name without prejudice. We think that there is good evidence that the name was given by divine authority, but if that position is changed it is still evident that it was not a slur of the enemy for it seems to have been received without protest and with approbation for it was deemed worthy to be put in the record and to be afterwards used by New Testament writers. The name is at least appropriate and in fact all the followers of Christ love it, and they ought to keep their sectarian hand off of it.

What is it now that we propose?

Christ. The head of the church, popes, prelates and all other usurpers to the rear.

Christian: The name significant enough to designate all the followers of Christ.

Fellowship: Broad enough to include every child of grace, not based on doctrinal subscriptions but on christian love and character.

Liberty: That recognizes the right of the individual conscience without let or hindrance from mortal man, and as we would answer to the Lord.

Scriptures: An all sufficient rule of faith and practice for all of God's people.

Unity: The ultimate aim of the church, on the basis of love, even as Christ loved us.

It must now be said that we are not in the field to antagonize or to discredit any good work or any people but to love and work on the line of the broadest principles of christian charity. We will not boast of our age or size but of the par excellence of our principles believing that they antidate all denominational origins. We will be willing to sink out of public sight personally and denominationally, if denominational we are, when the glad day shall come that the whole church has struck her bed rock of unity in Christ.

IMPEACHED

Were Several of the Public Officials of an Indiana Town.

New Albany, Ind., Aug 31.—William V. Crose, mayor of this city, was impeached and removed from office by the city council. John Tegart and Charles W. Putch, members of the board of public works, were also removed from office. City Clerk Eugene Brisby assumed the office of mayor. Acting Mayor Brisby then appointed a new board of public works. The removal of the mayor and members of the board of public works is the result of an investigation conducted by the councilmanic committee on supervision and investigation. The acceptance of a new sewage system, just completed at a cost of $229,000, by the mayor and board of public works is said to have been the cause of the impeachment of the mayor and the removal of the board of works members.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials. Address:

To Enforce Rest Day Laws.

Paris, Aug. 31.—President Fallieres signed a decree bringing the compulsory weekly rest day law into operation Sept. 1. There is much interest as to the attitude the restaurant keepers and cafe proprietors will take, and whether they will carry out their threat to close all their establishments Sunday. The employes accuse employers of unfairly trying to set the public against the law, but the employers claim that the law is a direct attack on individual liberty and contrary to all republican ideas.

London, Aug. 31. — The first train over the new short route to Ireland by way of Fishguard (a seaport of Wales) and Rosslare (near Wexford, Ireland) left Paddington station here. The great western railway has spent nearly $15,000,000 in establishing the new service, of which $2,500,000 was spent in improving the harbor of Fishguard. It is claimed that the new route will save several hours in the American mails from Queenstown to London.

Butchers Form Union.

The butcher workmen at the stockyards, whose union was disrupted by the big strike in 1904, are beginning to organize again, although they are being closely watched by foremen and superintendents. The cattle butchers and the beef boners, two of the most skilled classes of workmen, have good organizations now, and the sheep butchers are making application for membership in large numbers.

The officers of the unions assert, however, that it is difficult to get members to attend the union meetings because of the close surveillance of the foremen. Many of them have attended a union meeting and been discharged the following day, and the organizers, who are now working quietly among them, have a difficult task to build up the organization.—Chicago Record-Herald.

She staggered back as if he had struck her. "Leave you!" she cried.

"You must leave the court."

"The court! Aye, willingly; this instant! But you! Ah, sire, you ask what is impossible."

"I do not ask, madame; I order. Since you have learned to abuse your position, your presence has become intolerable. The united kings of Europe have never dared to speak to me as you have spoken today. Such things are not done twice, madame. You see your mistake now. At 6 o'clock you leave Versailles forever." His eyes flashed and his small upright figure seemed to swell in the violence of his indignation, while she leaned away from him, one hand across her eyes.

"Oh, I have been wicked!" she cried. "I know it; I know it; How could I speak to you so! How could I! Oh, that some blight may come upon this unhappy tongue! I, who have had nothing but good from you! I to insult you, who are the author of all my happiness! Oh, sire, forgive me, forgive me; for pity's sake forgive me!"

Louis was by nature a kind hearted man. His feelings were touched, and his pride also was flattered by the abasement of this beautiful and haughty woman. His face softened somewhat in its expression as he glanced at her, but he shook his head, and his voice was as firm as ever as he answered.

"It is useless, madame," said he. "I have thought this matter over for a long time, and your madness today has only hurried what must in any case have taken place. You must leave the palace."

"I will leave the palace. Say only that you forgive me. Oh, sire, I cannot bear your anger. It crushes me down. I am not strong enough. It is not banishment, it is death to which you sentence me. Think of our long years of love, sire, and say that you forgive me. Oh, will you not give your anger up for mine? My God, he weeps! Oh, I am saved; I am saved!"

"No, no, madame," cried the king, dashing his hand across his eyes. "You see the weakness of the man, but you shall also see the firmness of the king. As to your insults today, I forgive them freely, if that will make you more happy in your retirement. But a time has come when it is necessary to review our past life and to prepare for that which is to come."

"Ah, sire, you pain me. You are not yet in the prime of your years, and you speak as if old age were upon you. In a score of years from now it may be time for folks to say that age has made a change in your life."

The king winced. "Who says so?" he cried angrily.

"Oh, sire, it slipped from me unawares. Think no more of it. Nobody says so. Nobody."

"You are hiding something from me. Who is it who says this?"

"Oh, sire, it was but foolish court gossip, all unworthy of your attention. To me, sire, you are as pleasing and as gracious as when you first won the heart of Mlle. Tonnay-Charente."

The king smiled as he looked at the beautiful woman before him.

"In very truth," said he, "I can say that there has been no such great changes in Mlle. Tonnay-Charente either. But still it is best that we should part, Francoise."

"You have but to name the place, sire—Petit Bourg, Chargny or my own convent of St. Joseph in the Faubourg St. Germain. What matter where the flower withers when once the sun has forever turned from it? At least the past is my own, and I shall live in the remembrance of the days when none had come between us and when your sweet love was all my own. Be happy, sire, be happy, and think no more of what I said about the foolish gossip of the court. Your life lies in the future. Mine is in the past. Adieu, dear sire, adieu!" She threw forward her arms, her eyes dimmed over, and she would have fallen had Louis not sprung forward and caught her in his arms. Her beautiful head drooped upon his shoulder, her breath was warm upon his cheek, and the subtle scent of her hair was in his nostrils. Her broad white throat was thrown back, her eyes almost closed, her lips just parted enough to show the line of pearly teeth, her beautiful face not three inches from his own. And then suddenly the eyelids quivered, and the great blue eyes looked up at him lovingly, appealingly, half deprecating, half challenging, her whole soul in a glance. Did he move? Or was it she? Who could tell? But their lips had met in a long kiss and then in another, and plans and resolutions were streaming away from Louis like autumn leaves in the west wind.

"Then I am not to go! You would not have the heart to send me away, would you?"

"No, no: but you must not annoy me, Francoise."

"I had rather die than cause you an instant of grief. Oh, sire, I have seen so little of you lately! And I love you so! It has maddened me. And then that dreadful woman"—

"Who, then?"

"Oh, I must not speak against her. I will be civil for your sake even to her, the widow of old Scarron."

"Yes, yes, you must be civil. I cannot have any unpleasantness."

"But you will stay with me, sire?" Her supple arms coiled themselves round his neck. Then she held him for an instant at arm's length to feast her eyes upon his face, and then drew him once more toward her. "You will not [illegible]

"I have been very harsh with you, Francoise. You will forgive me. Have you paper and pencil, that I may countermand the order?"

"They are here, sire, upon the side table. I have also a note which, if I may leave you for an instant, I will write in the anteroom."

She swept out with triumph in her eyes. It had been a terrible fight, but all the greater the credit of her victory. She took a little pink slip of paper from an inlaid desk and dashed off a few words upon it. They were, "Should Mme. de Maintenon have any message for his majesty he will be for the next few hours in the room of Mme. de Montespan." This she addressed to her rival, and it was sent on the spot, together with the king's order, by the hands of a page.

CHAPTER VIII.

FOR nearly a week the king was constant to his new humor. The routine of his life remained unchanged, save that it was the room of the frail beauty rather than of Mme. de Maintenon which attracted him in the afternoon. And in sympathy with this sudden relapse into his old life his coats lost something of their somber hue. His walk was brisker, and he gave a youthful flourish to his cane as a defiance to those who had seen in his reformation the first symptoms of age.

And as the king brightened, so all the great court brightened too. The salons began to resume their former splendor, and gay coats and glittering embroidery which had lain in drawers for years were seen once more in the halls of the palace. The Montespan anteroom was crowded every morning with men and women who had some suit to be urged, while her rival's chambers were as deserted as they had been before the king first turned a gracious look upon her. Faces which had been long banished from the court began to reappear in the corridors and gardens unchecked and unrebuked, while the black cassock of the Jesuit and the purple soutane of the bishop were less frequent colors in the royal circle.

But the church party was never seriously alarmed at this relapse. The grave eyes of priest or of prelate followed Louis in his escapade as wary huntsmen might watch a young deer which gambols about in the meadow under the impression that it is masterless when every gap and path is netted and it is in truth as much in their hands as though it were lying bound before them. They waited, therefore, and they silently planned how the prodigal might best be dealt with on his return.

To this end it was that his confessor, Pere la Chaise, and Bossuet, the great bishop of Meaux, waited one morning upon Mme. de Maintenon in her chamber. With a globe beside her, she was endeavoring to teach geography to the lame Duc du Maine, and the mischievous little Comte de Toulouse, who had enough of their father's disposition to make them averse to learning and of their mother's to cause them to hate any discipline or restraint.

Mme. de Maintenon dismissed her two pupils and received the ecclesiastics with the mixture of affection and respect which was due to those who were not only personal friends, but great lights of the Gallican church. The last few days had cast a pallor over her face which spiritualized and refined the features, but she wore unimpaired her expression of sweet serenity.

"I see, my dear daughter, that you have sorrowed," said Bossuet, glancing at her with a kindly and yet searching eye.

"I have indeed, your grace. All last night I spent in prayer that this trial may pass away from us."

"And yet you have no need for fear, madame—none, I assure you. Others may think that your influence has ceased, but we, who know the king's heart, think otherwise. A few days may pass, a few weeks at the most, and once more it will be upon your rising fortunes that every eye in France will turn."

The lady's brow clouded, and she glanced at the prelate as though his speech were not altogether to her taste. "I trust that pride does not lead me astray," she said. "But if I can read my own soul aright there is no thought of myself in the grief which now tears my heart. It is for the king I grieve, for the noble heart, the kindly soul, which might rise so high and which is dragged so low."

"For all that, my daughter, you are ambitious. Would you not love to turn the king toward good?"

"I would give my life for it."

"And there is your ambition. Ah, can I not read your noble soul? Would you not love to see the church reign pure and serene over all this realm, to see the poor housed, the needy helped, the wicked turned from their ways and the king ever the leader in all that is noble and good?"

Her cheeks had flushed, and her eyes shone as she looked at the gray face of the Jesuit and saw the picture which his words had conjured up before her.

"My daughter," said Bossuet solemnly, "it is time for plain speaking. It is in the interests of the church that we do it. None hear and none shall ever hear what passes between us now. Regard us, if you will, as two confessors, with whom your secret is inviolable. I call it a secret, and yet it is none to us, for it is our mission to read the human heart. You love the king."

"Your grace—father!" She turned in confusion from one to the other.

"There is no shame in loving, my daughter. The shame lies only in yielding to love. I say again that you love the king."

"At least I have never told him so," she faltered.

[illegible] We speak for the interests of the holy church, and those interests demand that you should marry the king."

"Marry the king!" The little room swam round her. "Marry the king!"

"There lies the best hope for the future. We see in you a second Jeanne d'Arc who will save both France and France's king."

Madame sat silent for a few moments. Her face had regained its composure, and her eyes were bent vacantly upon her tapestry frame as she turned over in her mind all that was involved in the suggestion.

"But surely—surely this could never be," she said at last. "What king of France has married a subject? See how every princess of Europe stretches out her hand to him. The queen of France must be of queenly blood, even as the last was."

"All this may be overcome."

"And then there are the reasons of state. If the king marry, it should be to form a powerful alliance, to cement a friendship with a neighbor nation or to gain some province which may be the bride's dowry. What is my dowry? A widow's pension and a workbox."

"Your dowry, my daughter, would be those gifts of body and of mind with which heaven has endowed you. The king has money enough and the king has provinces enough. As to the state, how can the state be better served than by the assurance that the king will be saved in future from such sights as are to be seen in this palace today?"

"Oh, if it could be so! But think, father; think of those about him—the dauphin, monsieur his brother, his ministers. You know how little this would please them and how easy it is for them to sway his mind."

The faces of the two ecclesiastics who had dismissed her other objections with a smile and a wave clouded over at this.

"My daughter," said the Jesuit gravely, "that is a matter which you may leave to the church. It may be that we, too, have some power over the king's mind and that we may lead him in the right path, even though those of his own blood would fain have it otherwise. The future only can show with whom the power lies. But you! Love and duty both draw you one way now, and the church may count upon you and you upon the church. It will serve you if you in turn will but serve it."

"What higher wish could I have?"

"You will be our daughter, our queen, our champion, and you will heal the wounds of the suffering church. The Huguenots must go. They must be driven forth. The goats must be divided from the sheep. The king is already in two minds. Louvois is our friend now. If you are with us, then all will be well."

Brains on Tap For Beauty.

If you live in Boston and "have the price," advice as to just what to buy when you go shopping may be yours, says a correspondent of the New York Press. A young woman in that town who recently was thrown on her own resources decided that her unfailing eye for color harmonies and taste in dress was a marketable commodity and opened an office where for a small sum she tells women what they ought to wear. Should her enterprise prove a success, doubtless many women in the same circumstances will take the shoppers in tow.

Two Profits vs. Five Profits

See the economy and directness of the straight-line selling system of the National Cigar Stands:

The tobacco that used to be handed from planter to leaf-broker, from broker to cigar manufacturer, from manufacturer to jobber and from jobber to retailer, from retailer to you, now goes direct from the fields to the smoker through the arrow-straight flight of the National Cigar Stands which controls its own factories and is itself virtually its own producer.

And Here Are Some Results:

Two small profits—one manufacturing, one retailing—instead of five! Operations in million lots, shared in by all the stands equally, instead of separate, scattered purchases in lots of a hundred or a thousand! A scientific system of cigar keeping, patented by the National Cigar Stands Co. and used by the National Stands exclusively, instead of the old-fashioned cigar case that only varied the monotony of cigars too dry by making them too moist! Twenty Minutes Time Enough?

To Cure the Worst Headache From Any Cause—New Reduction Method.

For Headaches

Most headaches and pains yield instantly to the new Reduction Method—Dr. Shoop's Twenty Minute Headache Cure. The cause for these pains is congestion—a rushing of blood to the nerve centers—which distends the veins to nearly the bursting point. Swollen and enlarged, these veins and capillaries exert an irritating pressure on the myriads of nerve branches and fibres. Then, there's a pain, and finally that excruciating, ceaseless ache. This new Reduction Method disperses the blood, distributes the overflow, and directs it to the proper channels. It frees the nerve centers from all pressure and irritation—the pains and aches disappear because their cause has been removed. You may try a thousand remedies—you may drug and stupify the nerves into submission—but the remedy which brings prompt relief and permanent cure will be successful because it reduces the congestion—it must embody the Reduction Method. Medicine has thus found a way—simple and sure, yet the only way—to thoroughly overcome these attacks of Headache and Neuralgia. The effect of Dr. Shoop's Twenty Minute Headache Cure is prompt—perfectly suited to all forms of Headache and absolutely positive in every temperament. For sale and recommended by

SINFUL SECRECY.

Coroner King of Philadelphia comes before the footlights as a man unfit to hold the position to which he has been elected. Thursday afternoon, weeks after the sudden death of Frank Hipple, the president of the failed Real Estate Trust Co. he comes forward with the admission that Banker Hipple was a suicide. To the trustful depositors of that bank about $8,000,000 is lost. Perhaps none could have been recovered had the coroner told the truth at the time of the president's death, but he cannot hide behind that hypothesis. His duty was to render a verdict at once and if it were a case of suicide so tell the public. Millions might have been saved. Too often public officials imagine they are the rulers instead of the servants of the people. And when they swerve from the straight and narrow line that marks their duty, then do they fall, and ages of such sinful secrecy does not seem to have taught them the lesson.

CONCERNING OHIO POLITICS

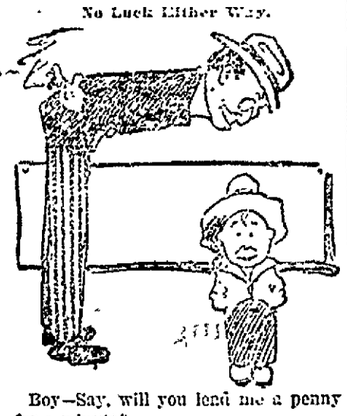

Tom L. Johnson may be the idol of Cleveland, which, some of the muck rakers tell us he has made the best governed city in America while others insist that Cleveland drinks its own filth and then lies about its typhoid record; but Johnson is not yet the boss of the Ohio Democrats. Last year Johnson undertook to control the Democratic state convention, but was beaten by Pattison, who died before he was able to administer the governorship to which he was elected. Johnson, however, is nothing if not persistent.

He tried again this year, being candidate for chairman of the state committee and member of the national committee from Ohio. He was beaten by Congressman Garber, but announced that he would try again. There is no governor to be elected in Ohio this fall, so the importance of the state convention is chiefly tactical. The chairman's speech mentioned Judson Harmon and General McMahon as good presidential timber, but did not mention Johnson. The first love of the Ohio Democrats is Bryan, who was described as "not merely efficient, but sufficient."

With due respect to the neat rhetoric of that phrase, it is just the efficiency of Mr. Bryan that has never been proved. The two defeats which he has led ought to qualify him as what a dialect comedian used to call "sufficiency," but the Ohio chairman had no thought of Dutch comedians when he coined his phrase. The Ohio Democrats will stand by Bryan and they will applaud Johnson as drum major of the Bryan parade, but allowing him to distribute the offices at home is another matter. For that they prefer a Buckeye of an older Growth. — Brooklyn Eagle (Dem.)

Williams Noncommittal.

Washington, Aug 31 — Representative John Sharp Williams of Mississippi, the minority leader of the house, spent a few hours in Washington en route to his home in Mississippi. Mr. Williams said he would have been glad to attend the Bryan reception in New York but for the fact that on account of his long absence abroad he was anxious to be with his family. While in Europe he said he had seen Mr. Bryan and discussed political matters with him. He was noncommittal regarding the details of that talk.

Gloom or Ginger?

Both Are Found Lurking In Your Breakfast, Dinner and Supper.

Not many people realize that the easiest way to affect the brain is through the stomach. The most common illustration of this is the result of drinking whiskey or any intoxicating drink. The same is true as to any article of food.

And you have probably at times eaten something that lay like a lump of lead on your stimach. You can't forget how it makes you feel,—groggy, uncomfortable and peevish. That's because everything that affects the stomach affects the brain: If your stimach feels good, you will.

But not everything will have a happy effect on the brain. Pie won't. Neither will grease or fat. That's because there is no nourishment in them, they simply create heat but no strength. They make the stomach work overtime, make you dreary, and your brain foggy.

Nature has made the cereals to supply the brain and muscle of the world. The most intensely nourishing cereals are wheat and barley. By eating these you get the greatest amount of strength and blood-fibre it is possible to get from any food in the world.

That's what Hardyfood is made of—wheat and malted barley. Every particle of indigestible material found in them is thrown out, and there is left nothing but the very life of the grain—the purest wheat and barley.

You can eat Hardyfood for breakfast, dinner of supper, or noonday luncheon with cream, and it will taste delicious.

Often you sit at table and don't know what you want. Just eat Hardyfood. It will satisfy that peculiar craving in your stomach, make you feel as though you had had a fulsome, delicious meal, and without any of the bad after-effects. It will make your stomach feel fine. It will make your brain feel clear, and you will smile and be good natured. That's the object. Smiles flirt with success.

Hardyfood builds brain, bone, brawn and nerve, because it contains world.

You can't get muscle from a tenderloin steak; you can't remember things any better by eating ham. These things make fat—all fat and no brain.

Hardyfood gives the maximum of nerve and brain force, and demands the minimum of digestion. You hardly need a stomach to digest it.

It will make you feel good all over. It is the life of the whole family.

Buy Hardyfood of any grocer for 10c a package.

A man, at present unknown, who completed the party, escaped uninjured. Gamble, who is manager of the Toledo motor garage, took the party out for a night spin. The big machine was rushing along the road and did not slacken as it approached the crossing. A freight train, standing across the road, was seen too late.

A CRITICAL PERIOD

INTELLIGENT WOMEN PREPARE

Dangers and Pain of This Critical Period Avoided by the Use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

How many women realize that the most critical period in a woman's existence is the change of life, and that the anxiety felt by women as this time draws near is not without reason?

If her system is in a deranged condition, or she is predisposed to apoplexy or congestion of any organ, it is at this time likely to become active and, with a host of nervous irritations, make life a burden.

At this time, also, cancers and tumors are more liable to begin their destructive work. Such warning symptoms as a sense of suffocation, hot flashes, dizziness, headache, dread of impending evil, sounds in the ears, timidity, palpitation of the heart, sparks before the eyes, irregularities, constipation, variable appetite, weakness and inquietude are promptly heeded by intelligent women who are approaching the period of life when woman's great change may be expected.

We believe Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the world's greatest remedy for women at this trying period.

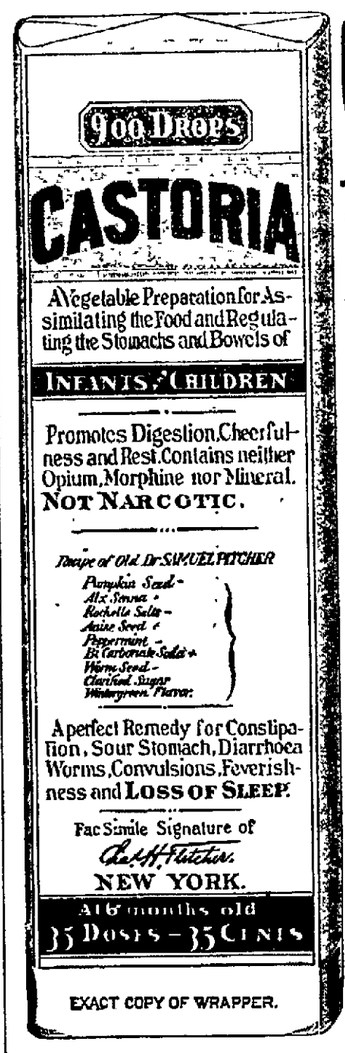

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound invigorates and strengthens the female organism, and builds up the weakened nervous system as no other medicine can.

Mrs. A. E. G. Hyland, of Chestertown, Md., in a letter to Mrs. Pinkham, says:

Dear Mrs. Pinkham:—

"I had been suffering with a displacement for years and was passing through the change of life. I had a good deal of soreness, dizzy spells, headaches, and was very nervous. I wrote you for advice and commenced treatment with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as you directed, and I am happy to say that all those distressing symptoms left me, and I have passed safely through the change of life a well woman."

For special advice regarding this important period women are invited to write to Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass. She is daughter-in-law of Lydia E. Pinkham and for twenty-five years has been advising sick women free of charge. Her advice is free and always helpful to ailing women.

ception. It was kind in Tom Johnson, that example of moral courage that we so much need in this country, to lend his presence to this occasion; kind in the officers of this league to bring you here; kind in Mr. Thomas to voice the welcome in words so generous that I could not admit myself worthy of them; kind in you to so fully recompense me for any danger that I have encountered or any sacrifice that I have made in being absent so long, from my native land. I cannot use a better phrase than the old simple one 'I thank you.'"

One Discordant Note.

The only discordant note sounded during the evening was when Mr. Bryan turned to a discussion of Socialism and declared that the man who says the trust is an economic growth and has come to stay is the one who is helping the Socialist. Some one yelled, "Three cheers for Socialism," but the call was drowned in hisses. Mr Bryan quickly said: "My friends, I have no objection to any man expressing himself in favor of Socialism, because the Socialist, as a rule, is an honest man. He is seeking what he believes to be a beneficial measure with argument and not with a business. I deny that the trust is an institution necessary for economic purposes. I deny that it is an economic institution at all. It is not economical, it is political. It rests not on natural laws, but on man-made laws."

Mr. Bryan concluded his address at 10:10 o'clock and then the audience cheered wildly for a minute. Then many hundreds rushed toward the platform to shake hands with the speaker. He smiled again and again. Mr. Bryan was a trifle hoarse when he ended, and said he had not made a speech in a long time to such a vast audience or one that had cost him so much physical effort.

Mr. Hearst came in for a large share of the demonstration following the adjournment of the meeting. Many persons surrounded his box. He bowed acknowledgement and finally made his way out through a great crowd.

At 10:20 o'clock the vast garden was practically empty and a few minutes later the lights were out.

Overflow Meetings.

There were several outside meetings, the principal one of which was addressed in the early part of the evening by Representative Sulzer of New York, Governor Glenn of North Carolina and Mayor Lahlman of Omaha.

When Mr. Bryan had concluded his garden address at a few minutes after 10 o'clock and appeared outside the hall, he received another ovation. He needed no introduction to the vast crowd which had waited so long to hear him and he spoke briefly.

Mr. Bryan was then driven with Mrs. Bryan in automobile directly to his hotel, where he was greeted by W. R. Hearst. The party went to the reception rooms, where they talked for some minutes. Shortly before 11 o'clock Mr. Bryan, much fatigued, retired to his apartments.

New York, August 31—William J. Bryan left the Grand Central station on a tram for Connecticut, at 10:06 a. m. today. About 100 persons were gathered on the station platform, as the Bryan train pulled out, and they cheered as the train departed. Mr Bryan bowed his acknowledgments from the rear platform. A party of friends accompanied Mr. Bryan in a special car.

Hon. W. A. Ashbrook, Democratic candidate for congress in this district, has been making a personal canvas of Wayne county the past few days. Tuesday he went to a Republican in Franklin township and after being introduced and striking up a pleasant conversation he asked if he could not tell him the name of three or four Republicans in his precinct who he could get to vote for him this fall.

"I don't believe I can," the gentleman told Mr. Ashbrook. "I know that I am going to vote for Judge Smyser this fall, and as far as I know all the other Republicans in my neighborhood are going to do the same thing."

"I didn't think it necessary to tell him," the gentleman told a friend, "but all the Democrats in my neighborhood who have spoken to me on the subject have stated that they intend to vote for Judge Smyser too." —Wooster Republican.

SORES AND ULCERS

TROUBLESOME-OFFENSIVE-DANGEROUS

Nothing is more discouraging than to have an unhealthy sore or ulcer resist one treatment after another, sometimes scabbing over and apparently getting well, then returning with renewed energy and becoming worse than before. Sores and ulcers are not due to outside causes; if they were, salves, plasters, lotions, etc., would cure them. They are kept up by a diseased and polluted condition of the blood brought on by the absorption of refuse and waste matters of the body into this vital fluid. These accumulations find their way into the blood, usually because of an inactive and sluggish condition of the system. Nature intends that they shall be carried off through the usual channels of waste, but the different members failing to perform their duties properly leave the matter to sour and ferment. The blood then, in its effort to keep the system healthy, absorbs these poisons and at the first bruise, cut or wound the sore is formed, and the constant drainage of foul matter through it keeps the place open and irritated so it cannot heal. Another cause for old sores and ulcers is the polluting or weakening of the blood from the remains of some constitutional trouble or the effects of a long spell of sickness. S. S. S. begins at the fountain-head and drives out all poisonous matter and germs, and makes a lasting cure. As soon as the system gets under the influence of S. S. S. the inflammation gradually leaves, the flesh takes on a healthy color, and soon the place is permanently healed. Book on sores and ulcers and any medical advice without charge.

STORY OF RISE OF GEN. BROWN

How The Two Armesi Sang "Home-Sweet-Home."

Zanesville, O., Aug. 31—Ask almost any soldier in Ohio what is the favorite story of General R. B. Brown, the new commander-in-chief of the G. A. R., and he will tell you that it is the tale of how the blue and the gray sang "Home, Sweet Home," on the banks of the Rappahannock.

It is a story of a December night in '63. Two great armies were encamped on either shore, waiting for the dawn when a life and death struggle would be begun. The tens of thousands of soldiers were weary, hungry, cold, heartsick and homesick.

"Dixie" is Begun.

The two camps had quieted down for the night when suddenly a confederate band began to play the stirring strains of "Dixie." In an instant the confederate army was on its feet, and the fierce rebel yell was sweeping up and down the lines in a roar.

The echoes of "Dixie" had no sooner died away than a band in blue began to play "Yankee Doodle," and the army of the north arose and hurled back the wild cheers of hate and defiance.

Then the band in gray played "Maryland, My Maryland," and the blue band followed with "Columbia." Oh, but it was a test of lungs backed by the grim pasions of war.

But one lonely soldier bethought himself of his old father and mother up in Ohio, and in a quavering voice he began to sing "Home, Sweee Heme." Another soldier joined, then companies and whole regiments.

Caught Up Theme.

Far across the river confederate soldiers caught up the theme and in great waves of melody the notes to the grandest hymn to home that ever was written swelled up from the two armies that in a few short hours would be reveling in each other's blood. Again and again the hymn was sung. Taps sounded, but the notes of the bugles were drowned in the music of a hundred thousand voices. For the time being war was forgotten, hate was dead and brotherly love reigned.

The story goes that when General Brown, then a youth of 16, first volunteerd his services the recruiting officer refused to enroll him.

"Run along, sonny," said the officer, "war is a man's business."

Sorely hurt, young Brown returned to his home at New Concord and at once began the cultivation of a beard. Through five anxious months he watched that struggling young beard grow. In August, 1861, the federal government was beginning to realize that it would need every man that it could muster, and young Brown had no difficulty in being mustered in

At the close of the war Private Brown returned to Nen Concord, O., He had been in the service four years of life that most young men employ in perfecting their education. He was too sensitive to resume his schooling and he began to learn the carpenter's trade.

He soon became a country correspondent for the Zanesville Courier. In that humble capacity he did his work so well that the editor of the Courier sent for him and gave him a position as a reporter. Young Brown gradually climbed up until he became editor and manager of his paper, a position which he still holds.

PRACTICAL NATURE STUDY.

New Line of Grange Work Instituted In Pennsylvania of Practical Value.

[Special Correspondence.]

The zoological committee of Tioga county (Pa.) Pomona grange was appointed as an experiment at the June session of last year, but its worth has already attracted the attention of so many people and the results shown are so encouraging that it will undoubtedly become a permanent feature. Last summer was devoted more especially to collecting specimens of insects, birds and small animals and forwarding them to Professor H. A. Surface, state zoologist, at Harrisburg. In the late fall and early winter printed matter relating to plant life was distributed and search made for signs of the San Jose scale.

The next work of the committee was arranging for the distribution of several hundred packets of seed, which were sent out among the members March 8, each packet acompanied by a circular reading as follows:

The zoological committee of Tioga county Pomona grange, as first lesson in nature study among our membership, requests that the accompanying packets of vegetable and flower seeds be divided among the younger members in grange families in each subordinate grange in the county and the results reported as follows:

Note the time of planting; time it takes to germinate; how it first appears and what growth it makes each week; how long it takes for the first bud to appear; how soon blossoms appear thereafter; the number of blossoms; time it takes seed pods or fruit to appear and ripen. Note what insects work on the plant, injurious or otherwise, and all other data possible.

Reports, with specimens of vegetables and flowers, should be sent to the September session of Pomona grange, when prizes will be awarded. A list of prizes for the above will be announced at the June session of Pomona grange.

As the season advances this year it is proposed to collect specimens of plants, rocks, woods, birds' nests, etc., and preserve them at our grange halls. It is hoped in this way to build up a museum containing specimens of everything that grows in our county as well as samples of rocks and minerals.

E. R. MULFORD.

A HIGH COMPLIMENT.

The Grange and the Public School Should Co-operate.

A school commissioner who has had large experience and is recognized as one of the best in the state paid the grange this high compliment recently in a public address: "I always like to hear that the school district has elected a member of the grange to the position of trustee, for I am then reasonably sure the trustee will take some interest in maintaining a good school and keeping the school property and equipment in the best possible condition. The grange advocates education, and its members promote it."

Let us strive to live up to that opinion of a man outside the gates. The closer and more intimately the grange can be identified with the school system of our state the better it will be for the grange and the schools. The schools are not merely the educational centers of our rural communities. They are the factories of American citizenship. When we consider the percentage of illiteracy in the rural districts of New York to be greater than it is in the cities we must realize the importance of improving the rural schools and enforcing the compulsory education law. It is not to the credit of New York that eighteen other states have a lower percentage of illiteracy than we have, and the responsibility of changing this, so that New York shall have the lowest percentage of illiterate citizens in its country districts, rests upon the grange. Let us rise to the emergency and prove that the grange is in reality an educational force in country life.—New York Grange Bulletin.

Wisconsin's Fighting Senator

Personal Side of Robert M. La Follette, Champion of the People

Man of Iron Who Never Minces His Words and Is Not a Quitter—History May Yet Write Him Down as a Giant Among Pygmies. Orator Who Gets an Audience Going and Keeps It on the Move

SENATOR LA FOLLETTE'S most marked characteristics are pugnacity and persistency. He never quits fighting. It took him more than ten years to win out in Wisconsin, but if it had required twenty it would have been the same. He would have been there at the end, jabbing away with as much vigor and determination as at the beginning.

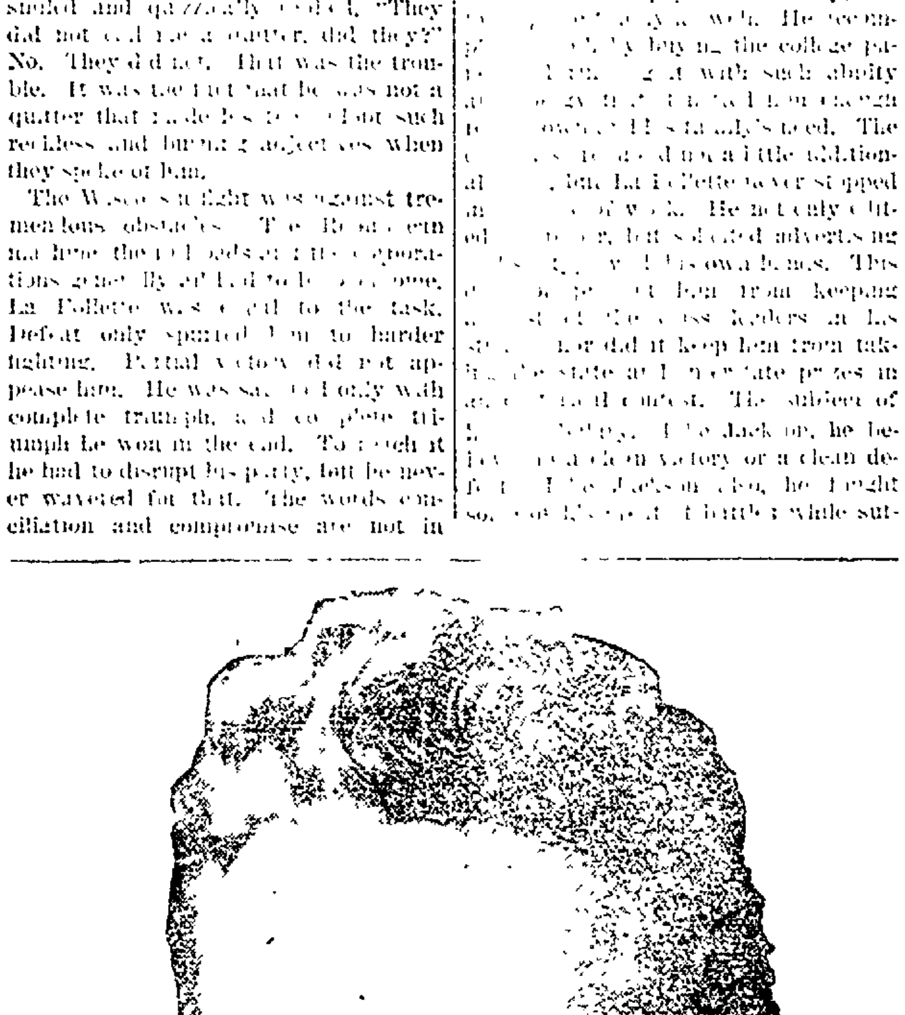

Not a Quitter.

When La Follette was told of the choice bunch of [illegible] that had been applied to him by his enemies he smiled and quizzically asked, "They did not call me a quitter, did they?" No. They did not. That was the trouble. It was too plain that he was not a quitter that made his foes [illegible] such reckless and burning adjectives when they spoke of him.

The Wisconsin fight was against tremendous obstacles. The Republican machine, the railroads and the corporations [illegible] La Follette was equal to the task. Defeat only spurred him to harder fighting. Partial victory did not appease him. He was satisfied only with complete triumph, and complete triumph he won in the end. To reach it he had to disrupt his party, but he never wavered for that. The words conciliation and compromise are not in [illegible] half a loaf, or none; he [illegible] nothing less than [illegible] state of reform. He never [illegible] words. He calls Rockefeller [illegible] criminal of the age."

Breadwinner of the Family.

[illegible] fifty-one years of age [illegible] fights [illegible] death and [illegible] circumstances left Bob [illegible] of the family. Yet [illegible] determination [illegible] one, for he [illegible] own way, but [illegible] He [illegible] the college [illegible] with such ability [illegible] The [illegible] little additional [illegible] La Follette never stopped [illegible] He not only [illegible] advertising [illegible] his own [illegible]. This [illegible] keeping [illegible] leaders at his [illegible] nor did it keep him from taking [illegible] state at [illegible] contest. difficult role. Young Bob had no little histrionic ability himself and at one time contemplated going on the stage, but, fortunately for the country, changed his mind and studied law.

An Instance of His Determination.

It was not long after his admission to the bar that he was elected district attorney of his county. Four years later, at the age of twenty-nine, he entered congress, where he served for six years. During his last term he was a member of the important ways and means committee and framed the agricultural schedule of the McKinley bill. In 1890 he was defeated in the great Democratic landslide. Four years later he re-entered the political arena, this time as the opponent of the Republican machine. He was not fighting for himself, but for another, and made an unsuccessful attempt to secure the nomination of Nils Haugen for governor. One incident of this canvass reveals La Follette's nature in all its unconquerable strength. The machine had carried half of the primaries of La Follette's own county, and to control the delegation he had to carry all the remainder. His lieutenants were ready to give up in despair.

"Gentlemen," said La Follette, "you can do as you please, but I am going to carry all the remaining primaries of Dane county if I have to crawl to them on my knees."

He carried them.

Beginning of His Great Fight.

In 1896 La Follette himself was a candidate for the Republican nomination for governor and had a majority of the convention with him, but his enemies secured an adjournment and by purchase or otherwise won over enough of his delegates to defeat him. It was his oration in both efforts was "Iago," and the light that he threw on that malign character is said to have aided Edwin Booth in his interpretation of the fering intense physical pain—pain that confined him to his bed a considerable portion of the time. Sickness could not daunt a will like that of La Follette—in fact, the man seems an incarnation of sheer will force.

Robert Marion La Follette he was christened by his parents, but Bob he is called by the world, for, iron though he is, in his personality rests the charm that makes others call him by his front name. One of his political opponents recently said of him: "La Follette's enemies have been made by his measures, not by his manners. It is possible to dislike Bob La Follette only at a distance."

Three Cardinal Issues.

What were these measures? Here are the three cardinal issues on which he made his fights in Wisconsin: Nomination of all candidates by district vote of the people, taxation of railways and other corporations at the same rates as that charged to others and the regulation of freight and other transportation charges.

What is there about these to make enemies? Out of their own mouths are his foes condemned. To admit that their only opposition to him is due to measures like these is to stamp themselves at once as friends of the trusts and foes of the people. La Follette has dared to stand for the truth that he saw, and the enemies of truth have hated him for its sake. The time has come to speak of these matters as they are.

This man has stood by his guns as has no other in the country. While other reformers have compromised and then that Robert M. La Follette began his great fight to have nominations made by the direct vote of the people.

Two years later he was once more defeated for the gubernatorial prize, but in 1900 he won out and was elected. But the victory was only partial, as he failed to have the legislature [illegible] his principles [illegible] re-elected and succeeded in having part of his measures adopted. In 1904 he was a candidate for a third term and had a majority of the convention with him, but his opponents bolted and nominated another ticket. Both factions went before the Republican national committee, and the enemies of La Follette won. Nothing daunted, the governor carried the fight into the courts and was successful. In the ensuing election he beat both the bolters' candidate and the Democratic nominee by immense pluralities and carried the legislature by a sufficient majority to insure the adoption of all his principles and his own election to the United States senate. He did not immediately take his seat, however, but remained governor long enough to force through all the measures he advocated, even threatening to give up the senatorship if they were not enacted. When all his pet ideas were on the statute books and his twelve year state fight was completely won he turned to the larger field of the nation.

Found a Proposed Steal.

One of the unwritten laws of the United States senate is that a new member must sit on a back seat, look duly impressed and say nothing. There are but few of the senatorial "kids" who have the courage to run amuck of this law. La Follette is one of the few. Placed on one of the Indian committees, a body in which ordinarily there is nothing doing, he discovered a proposed steal of several millions—some say over a billion—that the railroads were attempting to perpetrate in the rental of coal lands. This was going through without opposition when La Follette began asking questions. The promoters of the job became frightened and changed the bill. Still La Follette asked questions and showed a disposition to fight. Score point No. 1 for the new senator from Wisconsin.

At a later date La Follette decided to make some remarks on the rate bill. Those remarks extended over three days. They constituted, so it is said, the most exhaustive and best informed speech on the railroad issue ever heard in the American congress. Yet few senators heard them. The highest, or lowest, legislative body in the land was engaged in the dignified occupation of "hazing" a new member. Whether it was because of the fact that he wanted to be a senator instead of a wall flower and wanted to be it right away, or whether it was because he held notions unfriendly to the corporations, the Republicans absented themselves almost to a man. Referring to this fact, La Follette said that those who were temporarily absent the people would cause to be absent permanently. At this the galleries applauded so vigorously that the customary threat to clear them was made. Applause is strictly forbidden in the senate. It seems an unnecessary restriction, as there is so little done there that anybody wants to applaud that it hardly seems the body would be unduly disturbed even if the people were allowed to cheer to their fill. But tradition and dignity must be preserved, even though there is little else left to preserve. This is on the same principle that people must keep up appearances who have nothing besides or those wear brilliant clothes who have no other sort of brilliancy.

La Follette did not mind the senatorial hazing except that it was an unpleasant breach of good manners. It may be that he is bigger than the whole bunch of them and that history will write him down a giant among pygmies. He is just one of the kind of men who immortalize themselves. He can afford small annoyances for the greater glory that awaits him as the servant of the common people—"God's patient poor," as he himself calls them.

Deals With Folks Where They Live.

As a speaker the Wisconsin senator is really an orator. He is not much of a twister of the eagle's tail and all that sort of thing, but he gets an audience going some and keeps it on the move. For one thing, he deals with folks where they live. If he is talking on the subject of freight rates to an audience of farmers, instead of making classical allusions and quoting poetry he asks them what they pay for shipping hogs and corn and shows them by figures how much less they ought to pay. That makes the farmer do a little hard thinking, and when you start a man thinking there is hope of him.

La Follette is a little chap with a big stock of energy. I do not remember the exact statistics on his altitude and avoirdupois and do not know as they much matter. This article is not a foot rule and a weighing machine, anyway. Suffice it to say that however much there is of him he is all there and is constantly on the job. He has a business face and an eye that sees things. His mouth, though firm, is mobile and attractive. The most notable thing about him is a pompadour that sticks straight up like a dog's bristles when he is going into a fight.

Altogether Robert Marion La Follette is a better man than his traducers. Most people are. The average traducer generally hates himself, for cause, and gets even by taking it out on other people.

La Follette fights for the people, and they will fight for him. He is a "comer," and if you are measuring the future don't leave him out, for he won't stay there even if you do.

In the coming battle for the people's rights keep your eye on the La Follette pompadour and you will know exactly where the thickest of the fight is raging.

Channing Pollock On Stage Realism

He Analyzes and Describes It and Gives Examples. Other Views.

By CHANNING POLLOCK.
Author of "The Little Gray Lady" and dramatizer of "The Pit," "In the Bishop's Carriage," etc.

Notwithstanding the fact that most dictionaries define the word clearly, it is quite certain that any dozen persons would give as many interpretations to the phrase, "realism in dramatic art." To the average admirer of Lottie Blair Parker and Jerome ... realism means cows. The devotee of Ibsen will tell you that realism means immorality. There are as many different expositions of the subject as there are various kinds of plays. The Century Dictionary declares that realism is "the representation of what is real in fact," and surely this makes "Shore Acres" with its live stock as realistic as "'Way Down East," with its bovine accessories; "The Music Master," with its wholesome character ..., as realistic as "Hedda Gabler," with its morbid digging into souls. My own definition of realism would be: artificiality so blended with art as to seem reality.

There is no intention of declaring that "'Way Down East" is not a realistic play because its production includes cows any more than there is the intention of insisting that "Shore Acres" is not a realistic play because it does not include cows. When the scene shown on the stage requires such animals there is no question in my mind of the legitimacy of using them. Under these circumstances they give the verisimilitude of truth. Anything which does that makes for realism. Clyde Fitch's comedies are full of cows. Their bodies are stories which we recognize as dramatizations of everyday life, their legs are incidents which appeal to us as honest duplications of commonplace episodes, their horns are speeches such as come from the mouths of people we know. The author who makes his characters talk and act precisely as the men and women about us do talk and act is a realist. The motor car dialogue in "Man and Superman" is realistic, the return from the funeral in "The Climbers" is realistic, and the entire story of "Alabama," full of trenchant truth and simple sincerity, will always stand as the high point at which realism and idealism meet. I lay claim myself to one sort of photography in the second act of "The Little Gray Lady," where Anna Gray retires for the night. The winding of the alarm clock, the concealing of the purse and watch under her pillow, the placing of that pillow itself in a white slip, all are superficially realistic.

It seems to me that there can be no question as to public enjoyment of such material. Now and then some poetic idyl like "Peter Pan" may charm us for awhile, but generally our preference lies in that kind of dramatic matter which we recognize from its appearance. Those things which we have seen other people do, those emotions which we ourselves have experienced, strike us most forcibly in plays. If a man says to you that his wife has fallen from a balloon you are curious, but unsympathetic, because you have never been up in a balloon. If, on the other hand, he tells you that he is out of work and that his family is hungry, your heart aches for him, because you know what hunger means.

The decline of romantic drama in this country may be traced directly to the lack of fellow feeling for the man whose sword and not his spirit is broken at the end of the third act.

We are only at the beginning of realism on the stage in America. We are being hampered and held back by the same kind of theatrical managers who told Tom Robertson that it was not right to conclude an act without a couplet and by the same kind of laymen who found indecency in "Margaret Fleming."

William Pumphrey of Zanesville is in town today.

BASEBALL

That baseball game between the team made up of teachers attending the county teachers' institute and the Canal Lewisville aggregation, turned out to be about the most strenuous affair seen at Riverside park this season. With the score 3 to 1 in favor of Lewisville when the teachers went to bat in the last half of the ninth inning, the crowd was treated to one of the most exciting finishes of the season. The pedagogues opened up their half of the last session with a "never say die" spirit and in less time than it takes to tell it, two men had crowded across the pan and the score was tied. At this time the Lewisvilleites opened up a lengthy argument as to whether the first man scoring was out on a force play or not at the home plate. Before the argument had ended several of the Lewisville aggregation had left the grounds and the umpire had to call the game off.

The teachers claimed that their opponents were more than willing to quit while the score was a tie as certain defeat was staring them in the face. When the game broke up, the teachers had a man on third base and but one man down.

The game was an interesting one throughout, both teams putting up some nice work. Maston and Maston made up a first-class battery for the teachers and they had the Lewisvilleites at their mercy after the first two innings.

For Lewisville, Payne twirled a nice game. He pulled out of a bad hole in the second inning but after that the educators could do practically nothing with his delivery.

The batting of R. Maston for the teachers was a feature of the game, he getting four of the five hits secured by his team off Payne. He was up four times and hit safely each time, scoring twice. The game was attended by a large crowd of teachers and there was plenty of good, healthy rooting.

never so considered it; neither did Jackson."

A delay at the start of Mr. Bryan's trip caused an overlapping of the three meetings here to the disappointment of many. The mass meeting on the green had to be started before the luncheon was over, and Democratic conference was not completed until it was time for Mr. Bryan to deliver his third address. The chief change in the program was the inclusion of ex-Governor Garvin of Rhode Island as one of the open air speakers.

Mr. Garvin spoke at the luncheon, paying a tribute to the uprightness of Mr. Bryan.

"BILLY" WILSON TO BE WEDDED

"Legless Wonder" Will Marry a Show Girl at Cleveland Tonight.

"Billy" Wilson, the well known Coshocton boy who is better known as the "Legless Wonder" and who does the leap the gap on a bicycle with the Spellman shows, has grown tired of single blessedness and will be married at Lincoln Park, Cleveland tonight.

The bride to be is Miss Elsie Yeager, known as the "Flying Lady" also a member of the show troupe.

Friday's issue of the Cleveland World gives an account of the approaching wedding with the pictures of both the bride and groom.

The account is as follows:

When Elsie Yeager, the Flying Lady, is wedded to W. C. Wilson, the Loop-the-Gap-on-a-Bicycle Man at Lincoln park Saturday night, they have to find a clergyman who will be willing to climb a tree, for the ceremony is to take place on the high platform from which Wilson daily does his death defying dive on a wheel.

A pretty spectacle it will be. Miss Yeager, who ascends aerially in the Zat & Zan show twice each day, or so, is pretty. Wilson, despite the loss of his two legs, is comely. And immediately after the wedlock is fastened tight, he will shoot from his lofty perch for his regular turn on the long chute and the gap.

Wilson was formerly a soldier, and he served with some honor in the Spanish-American war. Only a few months after he left the army, however, he lost both legs in a railroad wreck, after which he adopted the profession of trick cyclist. He is twenty-six years old. His bride-to-be, the "flying lady," is several years his junior.

At Grace Church.

Mr. Walter Thompson has returned from the east where he has been all summer and will resume the leadership of Grace church choir at the services tomorrow.

But one lonely soldier bethought himself of his old father and mother up in Ohio, and in a quavering voice he began to sing "Home, Sweet Home." Another soldier joined, then companies and whole regiments.

Caught Up Theme.

Far across the river confederate soldiers caught up the theme and in great waves of melody the notes to the grandest hymn to home that ever was written swelled up from the two armies that in a few short hours would be reveling in each other's blood. Again and again the hymn was sung. Taps sounded, but the notes of the bugles were drowned in the music of a hundred thousand voices. For the time being war was forgotten, hate was dead and brotherly love reigned.

The story goes that when General Brown, then a youth of 16, first volunteerd his services the recruiting officer refused to enroll him.

"Run along, sonny," said the officer, "war is a man's business."

Sorely hurt, young Brown returned to his home at New Concord and at once began the cultivation of a beard. Through five anxious months he watched that struggling young beard grow. In August, 1861, the federal government was beginning to realize that it would need every man that it could muster, and young Brown had no difficulty in being mustered in

At the close of the war Private Brown returned to Nen Concord, O., He had been in the service four years of life that most young men employ in perfecting their education. He was too sensitive to resume his schooling and he began to learn the carpenter's trade.

He soon became a country correspondent for the Zanesville Courier. In that humble capacity he did his work so well that the editor of the Courier sent for him and gave him a position as a reporter. Young Brown gradually climbed up until he became editor and manager of his paper, a position which he still holds.

A HIGH COMPLIMENT.

The Grange and the Public Scho... Should Co-operate.

A school commissioner who has had large experience and is recognized as one of the best in the state paid the grange this high compliment recently in a public address: "I always like to hear that the school district has elected a member of the grange to the position of trustee, for I am then reasonably sure the trustee will take some interest in maintaining a good school and keeping the school property and equipment in the best possible condition. The grange advocates education, and its members promote it."

Let us strive to live up to that opinion of a man outside the gates. The closer and more intimately the grange can be identified with the school system of our state the better it will be for the grange and the schools. The schools are not merely the educational centers of our rural communities. They are the factories of American citizenship. When we consider the percentage of illiteracy in the rural districts of New York to be greater than it is in the cities we must realize the importance of improving the rural schools and enforcing the compulsory education law. It is not to the credit of New York that eighteen other states have a lower percentage of illiteracy than we have, and the responsibility of changing this, so that New York shall have the lowest percentage of illiterate citizens in its country districts, rests upon the grange. Let us rise to the emergency and prove that the grange is in reality an educational force in country life.—New York Grange Bulletin.

"HOME CLUB"

To Be Investigated by Officials of Postoffice Department.

Oyster Bay, L. I., Aug. 31. — The Roosevelt Home club of New York city is to be investigated by the people of the postoffice department at the express request of President Roosevelt, with a view to issuing a fraud order against it. Postmaster General Cortelyou was given instructions while at Sagamore Hill to take the matter up immediately. The object of the club as set forth in a circular issued Aug. 21 by Roderick Bett, who signs himself as president of the club, is to solicit funds for the purchase of the house at No. 28 East Twentieth street, New York city, where President Roosevelt was born. Some time ago, a subscription was started but it was discouraged by the president, who was given assurance that the matter would be dropped. The last circular indicates that another effort is to be made to carry out the plan. It was ascertained that 50 per cent of contributions received were to go towards maintaining the club. It is on this ground that the president believes a court order will lie.

New Masts For Warships.

The naval constructors who are engaged on the plans for the next battleship to be built by the United States have completed the design for a skeleton mast, with the same principle of construction applied to the yards, says a Washington correspondent of the New York Tribune. This mast will support the observation tops, where will be situated the fire control officers, those who direct the gun fire by means of observing the vulnerable points of the enemy and ascertaining by rangefinders the proper direction of the projectiles. Formerly masts of this kind were built of hollow steel; hereafter they are to be of skeleton steel framework so that a shot coming in contact with the mast or yard so built will not bring it down or do more than destroy a part of the support. This is a new feature in battleship construction and is understood to be adopted from foreign vessels which are now building. It will introduce the principle of presenting to the enemy as little of a target as possible. It is believed that the percentage of hits possible at sea in action will be small enough to protect the structure from demolition.

Spying by Airship.

Is the airship already beginning to lend itself to purposes of military espionage? An incident that seems to point in this direction is just reported from Cognac, France, says the London Globe. At about 5 o'clock the other evening a balloon passed over the town, sailing low, and came to ground about three-quarters of a mile away, near Combe des Dames. It contained four men who spoke German and admitted that they were from Strassburg. On being asked for their papers they showed only a pencil note, indicating that they were engaged on an official mission. At the gendarmerie they asked for the Swiss consul, but they are believed by the French police to be German officers.

REMEDY FOR HAY FEVER

After Trying Other Treatments, Mr. Forbes Used Hyomei With Perfect Success.

Before the discovery of Hyomei the only advice a physician could give to hay fever patients was to go away from home; but now if Hyomei is used any one who is subject to this disease can stay at home without fear of the annual attack of sneezing, the watery eyes and other discomforts

Mr. I. F. Forbes, a well known western railroad man of McCook, Neb., writes: "I never had any relief from any hay fever remedy even temporarily until I discovered the merits of Hyomei. I always recommend it when occasion presents."

There is no offensive or dangerous stomach dosing when Hyomei is used. This reliable remedy for the cure of gans is breathed through a neat pocket inhaler that comes in every outfit, so that the air breathed into the throat and lungs is like that of the White Mountains and other health resorts where hay fever is unknown

The fact that C. E. Anderson agrees to refund the money to his hay fever customers if it fails to relieve, should inspire confidence in every sufferer.

A complete outfit costs only $1.00, extra bottes 50c.

Can Bag But Ten Squirrels

Game Warden Martin has asked that a correction be made in the item in Thursday's Age concerning the opening of the squirrel season Saturday morning. The item stated that fifteen squirrels may be bagged per day when the law allows that a hunter may shoot but ten. The law also provides that no more than twenty-five ducks be bagged nor more than eighteen of the following: Quail, Carolina dove, woodcock, geese, rail, shore bird, plover and snipe.

Suit Was Dismissed

The case brought by Willis Coleman against Charles and Jennie Rodgers, John Knox and Herbert Gaid charging the defendants with stealing beans and tomatoes from his garden at Pleasant Valley, was dismissed by Squire Wimmer Thursday afternoon on the grounds that Coleman did not furnish sufficient proof that the parties he charged with getting his vegetables were the thieves.

LARGE GRANGES.

Opinion of Secretary of New Hampshire State Grange on the Subject.

The secretary of the New Hampshire state grange makes some sensible remarks on the rivalry in increasing membership. He has in mind the two largest granges in the world, the Wolcott of New York and the Houlton of Maine. The former had 871 members on March 1 and the latter 891 members. One bitter experience in membership contests is all that the Granite State Patrons desire. "We prefer," says he, "strong to large granges, and although Manchester, N. H., has more Patrons than Wolcott or Houlton its four granges are accomplishing vastly more in carrying out the mission of the Order than one large one could possibly do, and six would accomplish more than four."

We are inclined to agree with Secretary Drake in this opinion. While some granges can conduct membership contests with excellent result, such things are not to be recommended without reserve. There is liability to get persons into the grange in such contests as will be of no credit to it, and not only that, but introduce into it an element of disturbance that will prove most detrimental in the end. We are well aware that these contests have been conducted successfully, but this only when under the most conservative management.

Nearly every grange in Wayne county, N. Y., owns a library.

Tree of Death.

The Koreans are greatly excited over the appearance of a bamboo tree through the cracks of the floor of the room last occupied by the late General Min Young Whan, says the Korea News. Since the suicide of the general in November last the room has been kept closed, and when the room was opened a few days ago the bamboo had already attained the height of more than four feet. The Koreans find a parallel to this phenomenon in an event that occurred in Songdo 500 years ago when a patriot defending the emperor was done to death on a stone bridge just outside the city. Several months after his death a bamboo sprouted up between the stones on the very spot where the patriot had breathed his last.
